Wendy Robertson

The University of Iowa Libraries

Electronic Resources & Libraries, 2008

OVERVIEW

- Next generation catalogs and Primo
- Old “Smart Search” at The University of Iowa
- Implementation issues
- New “Smart Search”
- Features and Examples
- Problems
- Moving where users are
- Future plans

WHAT TYPES OF ELECTRONIC RESOURCES?

- Licensed/purchased full content (journals, books, audio, maps etc.)
- Licensed/purchased databases
- Local digital content (images, audio, video etc.)
- Local full text
- Local websites (including finding aids)

WHAT IS A NEXT GENERATION CATALOG?

- “It’s designed less like a “catalog”—an inventory list—and more like a finding aid. It contains data as well as metadata, and it is bent on doing things with found items beyond listing and providing access to them.” – LITA blog, July 7, 2006
- Examples:
 - NCSU’s Endeca[®] implementation
 - Open WorldCat[®] –OCLC
 - Primo[®] –Ex Libris
 - Aquabrowser Library[®] –Bowker (e.g. University of Chicago)
 - Encore–Innovative Interfaces (e.g. Michigan State)

SELECTED FEATURES OF A NEXT GENERATION CATALOG

- Faceted navigation
- Federated searching
- Full text searching
- Interaction with other systems/use of API's
- Multiple works merged (FRBR)
- Notification of new items by topic etc.
- Personalization, tagging
- Reader's advisory/recommendations
- Relevancy ranking
- Reviews
- Search terms highlighted
- Spell checking, did you mean...?

WHAT WE ARE AIMING FOR

- Simple to use, single search box for all our content

- With high quality content and good metadata

PRIMO

- The University of Iowa's choice for a next generation catalog
- Finding and discovery tool
- Not meant for the advanced researcher
- Work in progress ("Everything is Beta")
- Does not yet have all possible features of a next generation catalog

“SMART SEARCH” BEFORE

- Locally created search of
 - Library Catalog – keyword search
 - E-journal A-Z list
 - Local database of databases, websites, and book and journal collections (previously called the “Gateway”)
 - Libraries website
- Results from 4 sources not merged
- Did not include digital collections

GETTING INFORMATION INTO PRIMO: CONTENTDM

- Loader exists for Dublin Core
- We use LC Authorities when possible in CDM
 - DC lacks structure of MARC so some manipulation of names not possible for complex names
- Assess how subjects and types can best work with facets
- Results varied depending on CDM collection settings (standardizing)
- Some data inconsistencies in CDM (standardizing)

 <dc:description>"Eminent Domain bears the hallmark of a mature and talented author. While subtle metaphors and analogies resonate throughout the text, the surface of these stories is charged with vivid scenes of fishing, caring for game birds in winter, branding calves in Nebraska, and rescuing a wounded mountain climber. With both humor and poignancy, Dan O'Brien explores the lives of his diverse characters. In 'The Inheritance,' a businessman goes fishing after the death of his father and realizes, through memories he tries to evade, the richness of the inheritance his father has left him. 'Eminent Domain' tells the story of Willy Herbeck, who's 'dirty, sloppy, unsociable, old-fashioned, moody, bullheaded, and ugly.' But he's also 'got class' and is willing to go to extremes to keep from selling his junkyard to the government. At ease with a wide variety of characters and complex emotional circumstances, O'Brien enriches his stories with authentic voices and thought-provoking resolutions. These are stories you will return to again and again"--

INCLUSION OF LIBRARIES WEBSITE

- Goal was to have libraries website included at full release
- Public service said not critical
- Still very important for Special Collections finding aids
- Separate search available

WEBSITE

○ Current status:

- Successfully crawled www.lib.uiowa.edu (omitting pages that don't make sense).
- Modified an open source Perl product Swish-E Spider: <http://swish-e.org/docs/spider.html>
- Hopefully live before the end of the semester

○ Our biggest challenges:

- Crawling logic—Making sure we don't inadvertently access URLs that time out
- Character encoding as related to HTML and XML entities—we've had to tweak standard Perl packages

MERGING RECORDS IN PRIMO

- Two separate functions—De-duplication and FRBRization
- Rules assess similarity between records. Those that meet a threshold for similarity will be merged.
  - Dedup records are completely merged; individual records cannot be viewed in Primo but do have a link to Aleph catalog
  - FRBR records are merged for display, but also allow viewing of individual titles

PROBLEMS

- Online resource link is not being seen
- Databases have been difficult to find because of labels
- Known item searching can be more difficult (especially for major works of literature)
- Librarians concerned it “dumbs down searching”
  - HOWEVER: Users seem to like it
  - Concern that faculty (as expert searchers and older than average students) may not adapt as well as students

FUTURE PLANS

- Inclusion of Libraries' website
- Talking to LibGuides about including content
- Google™ book search and CIC's Shared Digital Repository (metadata and full text)
- Full text from local e-journals
- Investigating getting tags from LibraryThing
- Will include data from institutional repository

CONCLUSION

- Need to be flexible
  - Willing to change searching method
  - Able to adjust to constant beta
  - Able to keep up with user's needs & request
  - Able to incorporate new technology
- Tool that works for many people much of the time, but not for all people all of the time
- ILS not going away
- Electronic resources are especially important for access and have some unique problems
